Bob Andreotti

Personal Injury and Aviation Attorney

Bob Andreotti is a New Mexico personal injury attorney with more than thirty years of experience representing injured people. He has tried personal injury cases before juries in Texas and New Mexico and now focuses his practice on serving clients throughout New Mexico. His approach combines trial experience, careful analysis, and direct client attention during difficult times.

Personal Injury Experience

Bob has handled a wide range of matters, including car accidents, aviation accidents, slip-and-fall cases, premises liability, defective products, and claims against insurance companies. His experience with complex cases helps him evaluate technical accident details, identify key liability issues, and present each client's story clearly.

Technical and Aviation Background

Before becoming an attorney, Bob earned a degree in Aeronautics and Astronautics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and worked as an aircraft structural design engineer on the F-16 program. He is also a certified commercial pilot and flight instructor.

This combination of technical and legal experience gives Bob a distinctive perspective on aviation matters. In this part of his practice, he represents pilots in regulatory proceedings, advises on aviation transactions, and assists with the formation of aviation-related businesses.

Direct Client Service

Bob believes every client deserves clear guidance, direct attention, and committed representation throughout the legal process. Outside the office, he enjoys studying European and maritime history, building scale models of sailing ships, and hiking in the mountains and hills around Santa Fe.
